RED CROSS NUMBER

The women of Alderson and District have done such splendid work in their Red Cross efforts that we give this issue to them for their publicity.

All those interested in Red Cross work, please read the following letter, which was sent out last week to the secretaries of the different branches throughout the province. We are badly in need of more sewers, as we must try and double our efforts. Alderson has done splendidly this year for the Red Cross; but we must do more. If you cannot join, at least try and do some work. Come to the meeting every Thursday afternoon at the Unitel church, and help with the sewing. Take sewing home and try and find a few spare moments to do the work. Our brave boys at the front, having counted the cost, have gone to protect our homes and country and we must do what we can in return for them.

THE CANADIAN RED CROSS SOCIETY — April 25, 1918.

Dear Sir or Madam:

In view of the terrible conflict of the past few weeks, the demands on the Red Cross Society are becoming ever more serious. At the outset of the present fighting the head office of the Canadian Red Cross cabled

England: "Help us!"

Hodgetts, London. "Executive Committee met today. Instructed me to cable you not to let us be made suffer for lack of anything you can provide." Marshall, March 25.

It was felt that this cable expressed the sentiments of the Canadian people, and that whatever demands the Red Cross may have to meet, the men and women of Canada would be ready to rise to the emergency.

In view of the seriousness of the situation, a special appeal is issued. During the coming months, Canadian country women have little leisure to devote to Red Cross work, and that in consequence our output of Red Cross supplies is less during these months than at any period of the year.

Last week alone, over 12,000 British casualties were added to the men already wounded and disabled. The Red Cross can adequately meet the enormous demands made upon its supplies, only through the united efforts of all who are willing to devote still more time to the preparing of supplies for our sick and wounded.

The Red Cross is today, the greatest mother in the world. It is the mother of millions, while millions of mothers wait and pray at home. How much this work means is learnt only by those who are giving their services at the front, and to whom these services are given.

As the conflict grows greater so do the needs of the Red Cross increase. Under the circumstances, Canadian women arranged to co-operate with their respective branches to obtain an adequate output of supplies during the coming months.

Yours faithfully,

MARY E. WAAGERS
Hon. Superintendent of Supplies and Joint Secretary.

Vast Issues Depend Upon the Welfare of Our Men!

Cheer Up and Thank God for the Y.M.C.A.

TRY to picture yourself in the muddy cold trenches after exciting days and long nights of mortal danger and intense combat. Rushing "whiz-bangs" and screaming "coal boxes" are no respecters of persons. You are hit! But despite shock and pain you still can face the long weary trudge back to dressing station. Weary, overwrought and depressed you are prone to despair. And then the other coming orders with the bugle. There are other walking wounded, too! You must wait, wait, wait! And then—

Up comes a cheery Y.M.C.A. man, the ever-present "big brother" to the soldier, with words of many encouragement. Close beside the dressing station the good generous folks at home have enabled him to set up a canteen. He hands you biscuits, and chocolate or coffee.

Y.M.C.A. Red Triangle Fund $2,250,000, May 7, 8, 9 Canada-Wide Appeal

"In thousands of cases," writes an officer, "it was that first hot cup of coffee that dragged the man back to life and sanity." The tremendous helpfulness of the Y.M.C.A. as an aid to the "morale" or fighting spirit of the soldiers is everywhere praised. No wonder the Germans make every effort to smash the Y.M.C.A. out of existence.

The Y.M.C.A. is everywhere. You first met the helpful, mainly Y.M.C.A. workers in camp, then on train and boat; at camp in England and in France, close to the firing line. Often he risks his life to reach you in the trenches. He has won the warmest praise from military authorities, statesmen—the King! Have you a precious boy at the front? You cannot be "over there" to guide him away from temptation of camp, clubs, girls, etc., so send him in his supreme hour of trial. Your parcels to him are necessarily few. But the Y.M.C.A., thank God, is "over there," going where you cannot go—doing the very things you long to do—doing it for you and for help. Will you help? This vast organization of helpfulness needs at least $2,250,000 from Canada for 1918. For your boy's sake BE GENEROUS!!

—Thousands of soldiers decide to enter the service.

—Y.M.C.A. sells many useful things to soldiers for their comfort and enjoyment, all spent for benefit of soldiers.

—Services to boys in Camp hospitals.

—Red Triangle Clubs for soldiers in Toronto, St. John and Montreal, and Red Triangle and Leader for men on leave.

—Out of Red Triangle Fund, $75,000 to be contributed to the War Work of the Y.W.C.A.

Boys!

Here's your chance to do a fine stroke in the big war! Help the Y.M.C.A. to earn your big brothers overseas by joining in the

"Earn and Give Campaign"

Six thousand Canadian older boys are invited to earn and give $100 each to the Red Triangle Fund. That means $60,000 in all. Splendid opportunities will be used for boys' work in India and China; another $3,000. The National Council of Canada, and $50,000 to help big brothers in Africa. An excellent opportunity for information and pledge card. When you mail your card, send more units of Ten Dollars, you will receive a beautifully engraved certificate.

During the Raids

Londoners Undaunted by Showers of Shrapnel and Carry on cheerfully.

A Wimpying officer writes from London: "Half is the most extraordinary thing in the world. One can become so afraid of almost anything, and Londoners are beginning to accustom themselves to the visits of Hun airmen on moonlight nights, that they are, in fact, the most plucky people I know, taking these visits as a matter-of-course—like measles and other minorills."

"The Londoner, taking him by the hand, is a thoroughly sporting individual. What he would choose for steady enjoyment, there is nothing he would not do. What is his hobby? Is it ever over at district tonight?"

"There are full sailing, night. Theaters are full sailing, even on the brightest moonlight evenings. When the warnings go, everyone is off to the movies to see what makes the country's oil-suspiritedness go on, however calm one's nerves, for sharpshooting is the original, all-time, all-the-time sport of the mind, like rain, both the weather and the unquiet."

"Every district has its clusters, and every town more courageous aggregate. There are usually a few hundred men, who make up their quota by day and salve their consciences at night. He who is an ex-soldier, crippled in the war, is test-inseparable and has appointed himself the genial host of the shelter to see and hear him in a letter to the editor of the local newspaper.

"The Englishman must have his jets to be called the falling bombs of the "Ring Boys." A man from the English air force said it was London's fault. 'Not very long ago,' he said, 'about four thousand raids.' And it is the case of the officers and these in the ranks, the greatest care is being kept in mind. Personality is the greatest indispensable qualification for the chorus in a popular piece now running, "We're not air raid as one of these." The Englishman, however, is not too bad, but he takes his troubles hard.

The defenses of London are now remarkably effective and are becoming more so all the time. Nothing is truer than the wonderful display of the artillery barrage. It is said that the Englishman is a great statesman because he is a frequent observer from the roof of one of the breeds contempt if not the German imagine for a solitary moment that he could be beaten in a race by putting the wind up Londoners, one more colossal error may be made by the English. —Wimping Free Press.

Will Continue Explorations

Stettinians Expect to Take Short Rest This Fall and Then Return to Arctic Regions

In two letters received by Mr. Frank from the geological survey from Stettin, the famous explorer says it is his hope that should he be able to come home again in the spring of 1920. He writes that it is his desire and wish to return to the Arctic regions and says he has several plans for the future, all of which contemplate another trip to the North. He believes which geographic journeys can be made in the interests of scientific exploration.

"I am afraid that by now my Arctic work is the only work I am qualified for," he writes. "I am afraid I am less fit for any other work. It is my desire, and my dream, to find coal in what call 'dark land' near latitude 77° and in the Arctic Ocean. One of my ideas is for a three or four years expedition in the first place to the northern part of Melville Island or some other point attainable by ship, and after that our party would travel overland at a still more northerly point, perhaps in Baffin Island, and, for we shall be in the Arctic regions there, though we never had to travel to its source."

Professor Frank is the only major facing him to be troubled matters within his own party, but he said carefully.

Finding an Accountant

Had to Do With the Best He Could Get

The sergeant-major had trouble in finding an accountant for his captain, but at last brought in a private for trial.

"Are you a clerk?" demanded the captain.

"Well," growled the captain, "I suppose I'll have to put up with the 'sporing' son of a b----r who was around. Who were you in civilian life?"

"I'm a professor of mathematics at the state college," was the unexpected reply. "The Tailor."

Two men were—high discussing the merits of a book. Finally, one of them, himself an author, said to the other: "No, John, you can't appreciate it. You never had a good nose about that."

"I can do a bit," replied the man, modestly.

"That's the best man you can find," said the officer.

"I'm a professor of mathematics at the state college," was the unexpected reply. "The Tailor."

Two men were—high discussing the merits of a book. Finally, one of them, himself an author, said to the other: "No, John, you can't appreciate it. You never had a good nose about that."

"I can do a bit," replied the man, modestly.

"That's the best man you can find," said the officer.

A Notable Career

Baron Reading's Career Has Been a Hebrew Triumph

Of few men who have succeeded in life could it ever be said that he has not made a real enemy in the whole of his career? And yet the Briton paid him in the New York Tribune that perhaps it is easier for a Jew to triumph without offence than for a Christian. Baron Reading's success about the race that avoids rude, direct methods, and this helps a man not to involve himself in trouble. The new ambassador to the United States is a Jew, not perhaps with the exception of Mr. Edward L. Swathling, but nevertheless a royal Jew. Tolent as the British public is, it is not likely to resent the vantage for a man making his way in the world to be of a faith alien to that of the great majority of people, and the brilliant success of Reading is one of the more remarkable achievements in the history of the Jews. He is not yet an old man; he came of an obscure Jewish family, and yet he has risen to one of the most important positions in Great Britain—and without making an enemy.

As a boy Rufus Isaacs ran away to sea, but thought better of it, and returned home. He became a broker in brokerage house in London, at the suggestion of his wife, as he has been told, and was successful, and was eventually called to the bar. His success in this department, if not quite equal to that of his son, he did not have to wait long for the rewards. It is said that he was a surprisingly great success as a slave, quiet type. He always kept judges in good humor, and this is by no means the only duty to a lawyer who wishes to succeed. In commercial cases, his courtship of women on the stock exchange gave him great knowledge of business affairs that few could approach. It was not often that he would approach a commercial case, but once in a great while Sir Edward Carson, who thought his political advice to be "Med," he had to take second best. He was in a series of suits against London: a tobacco manufacturer, and the assessed damages came into five figures in pounds. It was a case that did not follow with the keenest professional skill all the lawyers in the British Isles.

Rufus Isaacs is a Liberal in politics, but a Conservative. He was a particularly close friend of George and when he entered parliament as a brilliant career was expected for him he was disappointed those who knew his abilities as a speaker. The reason is no doubt that many years in addressing juries must qualify him to a lower order of intellect than those in the house of commons. His mannerisms and single point escape the dullness of the average, but is apt to repeat frequently, to emphasize his points, and to use parentheses. In the commons, however, no man can speak on subjects that are not of interest to all other members. A style that is effective and necessary before a jury may not be so effective before a board of experts. Baron Reading was merely a respectable participant in the trials of the in the house as he ranked at the bar.

His parliamentary career had some successes, but as far as the so-called Marconi scandal, which did not now take up except to remain a subject of discussion when he was, Sir Rufus Isaacs, attorney general, was defended by Sir Edward Carson, who was then the present attorney-general, both political antagonists, and was completely beaten. Sir Rufus Isaacs, however, in what was, in a sense, a political case, was adversely condemned, and his political criticisms were somewhat dismaying when their fees, amounting to several thousand dollars, were given over to the Ulster volunteers fund. Through this case the legal profession was shocked to find that he knew him as an absolutely square man. He had never tried to deceive anyone, and he had never concealed a material fact. He played the game—and such strong political cards as he held Sir Edward Carson stood by him publicly.

If Baron Reading was not a brilliant lawyer, he had the unusual distinction of being invited into the cabinet as attorney-general, and he did not value his counsel. Probably he could have chosen which of the three great political parties he would have joined if he could have known what he would take. These are the Woodstock, or Keeper of the King's Conscience, and the Lord Chancellorship. Lord Chief Justice and Master of the Rolls. Perhaps he would have chosen the latter, but there is a law to the effect that it must not be held by a Roman Catholic, and he had a large class much patronage in the Established Church and it was felt that while he might be elected he could not be appointed. So he sought not to hold this great post.

Sandy Atross

Sandy McLeod and his donkey were well-known in the country that gave them birth, and the two were on very friendly terms. Sandy was a very simpleton, but "cudly" for the best thoroughbred in the land.

One day, when he went out for a ride, he heard a noise, and the key jumped a stream. He applied the whip and the animal galloped to the edge of the bank, and then stopped so suddenly that Sandy sailed through the air to the other side of the stream.

"When the Scotman had sufficiently recovered from the shock, he rose and looked the donkey in the face.

"Vermin pitch'd!" he said, "what are ye than to get over yore self?"—Pittsburgh Chronicle.

Why Not Voluntary Rations?

Mrs. N. W. Rowell believes that each family should have "conscience" rations

MRS. N. W. ROWELL

"I think the sooner people realize that we are not going to have compulsory rationing in Canada the better. We have got to feel that individual responsibility rests on each of us to put ourselves on voluntary rations. Every family should do it now. We have to save what we can, and that means we must eat less. If we do not reduce our consumption in every way we can, we have a right to a certain amount of constructive criticism, but this business of throwing stones where we ourselves are not actually doing anything to help is a most dangerous and reprehensible habit."

S. J. Steele

"Whatever we do in food conservation, we must do now. There is a strong desire among us all to have enough practice. It is my firm conviction that every woman's first responsibility is to the kitchen, whether she has maids or not. It is no easy matter to completely change one's habits, but I am sure that every woman can do it. It is what we must all do if we are sensible in our food-saving.

Mr. N. W. Rowell, wife of the president, says the privy council, before the first world war, did not have the snow from her own doorstep before she points to the frost on her window-pane. She is a woman of the kitchen, whether she has maids or not. It is no easy matter to completely change one's habits, but I am sure that every woman can do it. It is what we must all do if we are sensible in our food-saving.

Incidentally, Mrs. Rowell says that she has not been able to share this respect. There are many men, she believes, who find it hard to comprehend that their husbands are having all the dishes to which habit has insured them.

Strongly in favor of voluntary rationing, she believes that every family might have a definite scale to suit their needs. In fact, she believes, who find it hard to comprehend that their husbands are having all the dishes to which habit has insured them.

Memorandum of Prince Lichnowsky Shows That Germany Could Have Reached Agreement Acceptable to Great Britain, But Balked Efforts of Ambassador to London

Further sections of the memorandum of Prince Lichnowsky, German ambassador to London, before the war began, were written for the purpose of justifying his position to personal friends, and the Foreign Minister, organ of the Extreme Left of the Socialists. In the preceding section he had succeeded in getting his efforts to secure a better understanding between Germany and Britain accepted by the Foreign Minister, and by the ambassador to London in 1912, and how they were thwarted because of the pressure of the extreme left office in backing up the Austrian view on Eastern questions, the following section shows that he had failed to reach a collision with Russia and a world war.

The two portions of the memorandum deal principally with the negotiations over the Anglo-German commercial treaty. The first portion remarks at once that the good relations he had established in London were due to the marked improvement in Germany's relations with Britain. Sir Edward Grey, he says, was the first to bring him honestly to this rapprochement, says the prince, and his influence was so great that he was potterable as regards the colonial treaty and the Bagdad railway.

In 1908, Count von Hartitzsch-Hohenberg, the German minister to Britain, had proposed a commercial agreement with the British government dividing the Portuguese colonies in Africa between them. This proposal was of great interest between Germany and Great Britain, insuring the inviolability of the Suez Canal, the opening of the kingdom, and declaring the intention to support Portugal financially. The proposal was not accepted, therefore, he points out, did not clash with the old Anglo-Portuguese tradition of mutual neutrality. Nevertheless, at the instigation of the Marquis de Souza, Portuguese ambassador to Berlin, a secret Anglo-Portuguese treaty, the so-called Windsor treaty, was signed in 1908. Under the old treaty, the prince sets forth:

The First Question

Settle Social Questions After the Decision of the War

Victory or defeat in 1918 depends now upon the workshops. Every discussion, every revision and improvement event has been decided. There will be time enough to settle social questions after the war. That is the attitude of the British government.

They may be able to give the new treaty a form conforming to German wishes, but it is not a true one. A family does not live in its house which the house is on fire.

To the man who asks you whether any such a peace could be made to further our colonial development, while Great Britain also wished to have power from the North Sea and Western Europe to the Atlantic and South America, and to give her colonial development, a member of the cabinet said to me:

"That the treaty was practically in readiness in 1913, but that 'new difficulties' arose, and a year later, shortly before the outbreak of the war, could I repeat that it was, however, never signed?"

He adds: "Never signed."

Sir Edward Grey would only sign it on condition that the treaty be abolished, together with the 1898 and 1908 treaties, and that the 1908 secret treaties, if it was contrary to the existing principles to keep the secretaries from the cabinet. Therefore conclude no treaty without publishing

Russian Aviators

Are Poor Fighters

From "El Maiz" by Lieutenant Bert Hall, an American in the French Service.

From one end of the eastern front to the other was chaos, everything having been destroyed. One officer who had been sent over wrote home what they could to bring about some kind of organization. They had no plan in a state of organization, so some extent. It made me want to do something to help. My work took me from a point about 100 miles south of Riga at the north end of the Gulf of Finland down to the line on the Black sea at the south end. I had a chance to see what was going on. I worked with the officers and men of both armies, the Russian and Romanian. I saw the Russian army in the ideas of war after my two years on the western front. No system, no national holidays in Russia and no soldier will fight for a holiday. The idea of a soldier fighting for a holiday is a joke.

In the Russian aviation corps there could have been no more found that the men who would fly only when they felt like it. They almost always fought in German lines.

The average Russian aviator

aimed to fly six hours per month after his six hours he takes a long rest. When I started in to really come to grips with the machine, the Germans did what they pleased; they flew all around our aerodrome about the Russians.

Socially the Russian aviator is certainly a good fellow. They are always in a hurry and they don't care about anything.

The Russians are not air fighters.

They were very frank almost childlike, in expressing their feelings to me.

"Oh, we would be just as off as you are, we would be better than you."

I have often heard things like that.

Russia means nothing to the average person, they are not even very few patriots among them.

From the nose of the front door to the metropolis Grand Duke Nicholas He is a remarkably able soldier and a patriot.

He is the only man for Russia.

He is one of the few men who had any real influence on me.

He is the only man for me.

One instance, a thing which happened to me, will show better than any description what I mean.

It happened when I was flying over the front line in the eastern front when I saw him come over in our lines at about 1,500 feet.

I thought that he was a German, as he did not pay any attention to me.

When I returned I was very surprised to find that my comrade had given me a report of what I had done. That is all.

"We have been here a long time," he said, "and you have not bothered us. Now they will get mad and may come and drop bombs on us and may drop bombs on us."

I thought that this was a little too steep, so I moved on a little higher.

When I saw him again they were all about the same. Soon after I was proposed for the Cross of St. George.

The German who gave me the award

Lord Rhondda Cables: "We Cannot Achieve Victory Without Food."

"Canada Food Board,"
Ottawa

"In these stern days it is inspiring to learn that Canada is tackling the food problem with redoubled energy. The terrific pressure on our military front makes it all the more imperative that those behind the line should strain every nerve to defeat the enemy's avowed object of destroying the British Empire.

"Germany hoped first to starve the Old Country by the submarine campaign and then to smash her land forces. She has failed to starve us and she will fail to smash us but we cannot achieve victory without food. There never was a time when it was more needed.

"The Canadian farmer and the Canadian farmhand now have the opportunity to make an effective reply to the enemy's present onslaughts by bending their undivided energies to the increased production of those food supplies for which we depend to such vital extent upon your great Dominion."

(Signed) "RHONDDA"

London, April 10th

The Prime Minister of Canada, in call to Greater Food Production, says: "The crisis is grave and urgent beyond possibility of exaggeration."

Our Allies are depending upon Canada to produce this year more cereals—especially Spring Wheat—and more meat—especially Pork.

The world shortage will inevitably continue for years after the war, with this country being called upon to supply for the 200,000,000 persons in Europe who will be clamoring for food.

Measures have been taken and plans have been formulated which, on the authority of the Director of Agricultural Labor, will provide help needed for harvest.

City and town people who cannot go to the farms are helping to feed themselves by growing their own vegetables, so that the farmers may grow more food for export.

The food board calls for the utmost effort of all the people of Canada, because, as Lord Rhondda says, Food is essential to Victory.

Buy an Irrigated Farm FROM THE CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY

BECAUSE:

Irrigation makes the farmer independent of rainfall, and assures good crops, not occasionally but annually.

Irrigation makes possible the successful culture of alfalfa, the king of fodders, which insures good returns in dairying and mixed farming.

Irrigation means intensive farming in a climate associated with all the advantages of a densely populated agricultural community.

Irrigation in the Canadian Pacific Railroad Irrigation District is the longer an experience the greater the benefit derived having already demonstrated its success wherever intelligently applied.

This is the most liberal offer of Irrigated Farm Land on record.
